

5 TIPS FOR MAKING AN IMPRESSION AS AN INTERNATIONAL COLLEGE STUDENT

Before you actually became an international student, what did you picture in your mind when you considered the possibility? Some will mention going out, some will mention studying, and some may add, "I just pictured myself strolling on campus with my books in hand and an awesome smile like all of the college advertising." Are you worried about being accepted into college because you don't speak English or any other native language of another country? If you want to impress your people at college as an international student, here in this article, we have explored some tips for students to follow:

Get to know people

If you want to make an impression, get to know the person and extend a hand in friendship while keeping an open mind. But the truth is that you need to speak at least English to understand someone and to establish a friendship with whom you can spend the weekends. Therefore, step outside of your comfort zone and engage with others.

Impressive credentials

College admissions are competitive. Your grades, extracurricular activities, standardized test scores, and essay answers play vital roles in determining whether you get admitted or rejected. While you might be tempted to skip these crucial elements, they're essential for college success.

Learn the basics of the native language. You probably won't ever become fluent in a foreign language, regardless of how much time you spend studying it. However, learning basic phrases and expressions can go a long way toward helping you communicate better in class and around campus.

Never Be Shy to Ask

The more questions you ask, the more you will be able to improve your knowledge and skills. The desire to learn shows that you are interested in what they are saying and are paying attention. So never be reluctant to ask; it's one of the most important elements of being a good student.

A final word of wisdom

You need help from others to succeed as an international student. Ask your professor, advisor, or even the classmate sitting next to you for assistance. As you begin to ask instructors questions and make friends to work on homework with in class, this tendency makes you easier and more enjoyable.

Hence, when you consider these things practically, you as an international student can easily build your reputation and make an impression on the college environment.

If you need any kind of help or information, PCPS is always there to provide guidance.
